Aquila Heywood shares best practice alongside Prime Minister Theresa May in The Parliamentary Review

An independent platform for industry leaders to share their expertise and best practices while critiquing policy, The Parliamentary Review brings policymakers and businesses together to set the scene for future legislation. Combining exclusive forewords by the Prime Minister and Government ministers results in a unique view of how Government policy fares alongside the experiences of organisations expressing their views within.

Aquila Heywood has been developing technology solutions for pensions for decades and notes that, recently, perceptions about pension schemes in the UK have been changing, mostly due to auto-enrolment and education. The Company notes in The Review that both the business and the sector as a whole have much on their hands between new regulatory requirements and always trying to deliver value for money.

Success for businesses of any size does not always come easily, and this year's edition of The Parliamentary Review is indispensable for anyone who seeks to make a name for themselves in industry. It highlights significant developments and concerns for business leaders up and down the country.

Daniel Yossman, the executive director of The Review, has already commented that the upcoming Review should certainly be one of the most interesting and insightful ever. "It is always a privilege to work with such extraordinary organisations and for them to be able to share their individual success stories will always ensure that The Parliamentary Review remains essential reading."

Writing in The Review, the Prime Minister says that "British politics provides ample material for analysis in the pages of The Parliamentary Review."
